SPECIAL TO THE "TELEGRAPH"

LONDON, JAN. 18 (UP).--IT IS OFFICIALLY ANNOUNCED THAT FIVE PEOPLE HAVE BEEN KILLED AND AN UNDETERMINED NUMBER INJURED IN TWO TERRIFIC EXPLOSIONS WHICH OC-CURRED IN THE NORTHERN OUTSKIRTS OF LONDON AT 10.45 P.M. TO-NICHT.

THE NOISE OF THE EXPLOSIONS WAS HEARD 20 MILES AWAY. Considerable secrecy is being maintained regarding the exact site or cause. An official investigation has commenced.

"Annihilation" Of Neutral Ships

LONDON, Jan. 18 (Reuter). A German news bulletin published in Tokyo bonsted that German aircraft recently "anrihilated" two steamers, the Feddy and the Ivan Kondrup, in the North Sen. This is a typical instance not only of the German attempts to bully neutrals by deliberate violations of international law, but also of their deliberate evasion of the truth, as proved by the German "Trans-Ocean" news service which, on January 10, quoted a British Admirally statement that the two ships alleged to be annihilated were still affoat and were being towed to port.

It is interesting to note that London newspapers earlier this week reported the discovery of a gigantic German plot to sabotage Britain's essential services.

"I was aware of one racking desire-to be dead, dead, dead." So wrote Karl Billinger, victim of the sadistic Nazi chiefs, when describing in the London "Sunday Chronicle" in November, 1935, the tortures he endured at the hands of these monsters.

At that time Billinger's story was discontinued in the "Sunday Chronicle" at the request of the Foreign Office. It was felt it might embitter relations between the two countries.

With the publication of the Government White Paper revealing the cruelties practised in German concentration camps, the "Sunday Chronicle" has completed the amazing and fully documented story which Billinger related after his escape.

MY POSITION was growing precarious. For a week now I had been noting various signs which convinced me that my house in Berlin was under surveillance. Screams Stiffed

Then one morning at 5.30 the: door-bell rang. "Open up! It's the police!" said a voice. Revolvers and black-jacks were heaped on the table. As I glanced to the right my heart leaped to my throat. A line of thirty prisoners their backs to the room, stood facing the wall. An S.S. guard, under twenty, paced back and forth.

"Can't you stand still, you dog," when you're told to stand still?" he bellowed at an old man, kicking him. with all his might in the back.

The old man's head crashed against the wall. He fell to the floor. The trooper promptly seized him by the neck, pulled him up. and punched him in the face. The second man to my right began! gasping softly. I tried to get a lard came at seven . . . glimpse of him without moving my head. He was a sturdy fellow of twenty-five or so, and his face was livid green.

Tried To Stand

A few minutes later he started swaying, then suddenly collapsed. A trooper entered the room at that moment, seized him, pulled him to his knees, and struck him a terrific blow on the face. Blood spurted guards, from the man's mouth and nose. One guard rose from the card table and came over. "You're drunk, you I came to, they were kicking me dog," he said.

THE TWO GUARDS KICKED THE GROANING MAN IN THE STOMACH, BACK, AND FACE.

Mass Attacks By Air

SO far the results of German attacks by air have been very favourable to the defence. Nothing would please us more than if the enemy continued those piecemeal operations. But that is not to be thought of for a moment. Sooner or later mass attacks will be made, and then for the first time the world will learn what lessons are to be got from air fighting on a large scale between two well-equipped forces. Neither Spain nor Poland offered the means of judging.

As even a layman will understand, in an attack in mass some machines are bound to get through, but their chances of getting back may be very slen-

The difficulties of organising a mass operation are much greater, than the inexpert may think. An aeronautical correspondent points to problems which only experience—and costly experience—can solve. There is, he says, the question of whether to approach the objective as one large formation or to converge on it from different directions. If the former plan is adopted there must be a place of rendezyous which may entail waste of time and petrol, and probably in poor visibility. Moreover, such a large formation would spread over such a wide area that concentrated fire on attacking fighters would be difficult or even impossible, whereas the fighters would be able to attack the outlying enemy planes in advantageous circumstances. Other plans have their own problems, but the opinion of this acronautical specialist is that the method most likely to be employed will be to converge upon the objective in a large number of smaller formations.

Men cannot get along without a religion. If one is abandoned another is adopted. The spirit of man craves a friendly God, and you give him economics. He asks for immorfallty, and you say, "Be content, here is beer and bacon."---W. MACHELLE

Labour's

THAT should be the principles of a peace settlement? The first principle is that there should be no dictated peace. We have no desire to humiliate, to crush or to divide the German nation. There must be restitution made to the victims of aggression, but all ideas of revenge and punishment must be excluded.

If peace is to be lasting it must result from the agreement of all, not from the dictation of a few nations. The failure of the treaties at the end of the last war to bring abiding peace was largely due to the neglect of this prin-

But if we desire to build a new world its foundations must be laid not only by the large and strong, but by the small and less powerful. It is the function of law to prevent the strong abusing his strength at the expense of the weak. The smaller nations, just because they are not aggressive, bring to the councils of the nations a most valuable element.

The second principle necessarily follows. It is the recognition of the right of all nations, great or small, of whatever colour or creed, to live and to develop their own characteristic civilisation, provided that they do not thereby infringe the rights of others.

The German, relinquishing his conception of the primacy of the German race, must recognise that the Pole and the Czech and the Jew have as much right as he, no more and no less, to a place in the world and to a share in the bounty of Nature.

Equally, the Briton must recognise that the same is true of the African or any other inhabitant of the British Empire. The German must concede to the Austrian the right to decide his own future. The Briton must equally concede the same right to the Indian.

No Force

Thirdly, there must be a complete abandonment of aggression and of the use of armed force as an instrument of policy. War must be outlawed and the rule of law accepted. Where disputes cannot be amicably settled by negotiation, they must be submitted to the decision of disinterested arbitrators and their decision accepted: Fourthly, there must be recognition of the rights of national, racial and religious minoritles. While as far as possible every State should be left free to manage its internal affairs, there is a common interest in the prevention of oppression, and in the recognition of the rights of individuals.

Where there are racial minorities in any State, there must be some effective authority by an international body over the sovereign rights of the individual State. Fifthly, there must be acceptance of the principle that international anarchy is incompatible with peace, and that in the common interest there must be recognition of an international authority superior to the individual States and endowed not only with rights over them, but with power to make them effective, operating not only in the political, but in the economic sphere. Europe must federate or perish. gixthly, there must be abandonment of imperialism and acceptance of the principle that in the government of colonies and dependencies where self-government cannot yet be conceded, the interests of the natives must be paramount, and that there must be equal access for all nations to markets and raw materials.

We Have Learned—

This can best be achieved by an extended and strongthoned mandate system under international authority. We hold that the redistribution of colonial territories between rival imperialisms is no solution; for we do not admit that any nation has the right to hold others in subjection.

.. It will be seen that the acceptance of these principles will involve the creation of international machinery in order to make them effective. If aggression is to cease, there must be some force by which the aggressor can be compelled in the last resort to desist. The experience of the last twenty years has shown that to entrust the duty of enforcing the rule of law to individual States, operating with their own armed forces, has proved unworkable. There must instead be an international force, possessed of such overwhelming

-by The Rt. Hon. C. R. Attlee, M.P.

The following Principles of Peace were laid down by Mr. Attlee in an important speech at the Caxton Hall, London, recently. The full speech, which includes a comprehensive analysis of the events leading up to the war, is to be published as a

strength that no would-be aggressor would dare to challenge it. e For many reasons an international air force is the most appropriate instrument.

In addition, every State must accept the obligation of bringing against any disturber of the peace the power of economic sanctions. As a natural corollary of the establishment of an international force, there must be a drastic reduction of all national forces to the amount necessary for the preservation of internal order.

Such armed forces as remain in the hands of individual States must be subjected to international Inspection. Private manufacture and trade in armaments must be abolished.

The existence of an international force necessarily implies an international authority to control it.

It would be unwise to attempt to set out in detail the exact nature of such an authority or do more than specify the principles on which it should be established.

Fair for All

There are broadly two ways in which such an authority might be constituted. It might be autocratic or democratic. In the former case, a small number of great Powers might dominate and enforce their will on the remainder. In the latter, all States would share in decisions.

A world or a Europe under the orders of four or five big States would not be free. It might merely be an imperialism in commission. We, as believers in democracy, hold that the small nations which have formerly contributed, and still do to-day, so much of value to the world, should take their full share in an international authority.

I have already indicated some of the duties which an international authority would have to perform. It should deal with the difficult frontier problems which are the ostensible cause of the present war. The settlement of these questions is sometimes in the mind of these who speak of peace terms, but, in fact, the solution of these problems depends on the adoption of the principles which I have already laid down. Many frontier problems are due to boundaries having been drawn in conformity with strategic considerations which will have no relevance in a world from which war has been banished. Many errors have been made because of the exclusive nationalism which demands a coincidence of economic and political frontiers. Minority questions are rendered more difficult of solution owing to an exaggerated conception of the need for uniformity in a State, again due largely to military considerations.

Room to Live

It would be a mistake to try to redraw the map of Europe as part of the proposals for a peace settlement. It is right to affirm that Austrians, Czechs. Poles and Germans are nations with the right to room to live, but it would be premature to consider exact boundarles until principles have been accepted., Adjustments of boundaries, and even.

where necessary, and practicable, just and peaceful transfers of population, could be effected through the international authority. In some instances there might have to be provision for a measure of local autonomy-The Jewish problem, which concerns so many States, can only be settled by an international.

authority. It would be equally premature to lay down as part of the conditions of peace whether the new international authority should in the first place be confined to Europe or whether it should embrace other continents. That must depend on how widely these principles are accepted, though clearly it ought to bebuilt on the widest foundations.

No less dangerous than the political is the economic anarchy of the world. When the war ends, there will be widespread economic · dislocation, and great poverty, while the drastic reduction of armaments which we envisage will release an immense industrial capacity which will be wasted unless steps are taken to divert it into a channel where it will be of service to mankind.

Bold economic planning on a world scale will be an imperative necessity to meet the post-war situation, and to avoid in the future recurrent economic crises.

Social Justice

International institutions for this purpose must be created. It is of at least equal importance that the scope and nuthority of the International Labour. Office should be en-

It should be given the task of preparing international minimum standards of wages. hours and industrial conditions. in order that. by increased production, by a more just distribution and by the wealth released from expenditure upon arms, the standard of living of the workers shall everywhere be raised. For peace depends on social justice within States, no less than on political justice between States. It may be urged that the principles which I have laid down are too far-reaching and that the whole scheme is chimerical, idealistic and beyond the bounds of practical politics.

It may be urged that it will be difficult to gain acceptance for such a vast change and that it would be wiser to seek a more modest objective. The answer to this is that remedies are conditioned by the gravity of the diseases which they are designed to cure. If we want a peaceful world we must be prepared to face the great changes which must be involved.

We believe that these principles can be accepted by all peoples and can form the basis of a just and enduring peace.

We seek no favoured position. We do not demand from others what we are not prepared to concede ourselves. We appeal for support to these principles first of all to our own people, to all of those who, whether or not they belong to the Labour Party, share our faith in democracy and our desire for peace.

We ask them to consider whether or not in their opinion these principles meet the needs of this country and of the world. We appeal to the people of all countries who equally long for peace and we appeal especially to the people of Germany, in whose hands lies the decision whether or not millions of men. women and children are to suffer death.

Germany's Choice

Herr Hitler has started this war, but he can only continue it if the German people continue to support him. The fact that he is the leader of the German people does not relieve them of their responsibilities to one another and to the world.

Peace is obtainable now, provided that there is an abandonment of aggression and a recognition of the rights of all nations and of all people. We do not seek the destruction or the dismemberment of Germany. We wish no ill to the German people. We are ready towelcome them into the family of nations.

We declare our principles, which are no different from those which we proclaimed at the time when Germany was prostrate after the last war. We stand by our principles, met because of any weakness, but because of our confidence in the victory of our cause,

We are ready whenever we are called upon to take responsibility for the government of the country, to do our utmost to get these principles a cepted and put into effect.

TROUNCE NAVY FOX SCORES ALL FIVE GOALS FOR WINNERS

(By "Rex")

The first round of the Kotewall Cup was decided at Caroline Hill yesterday when the Army defeated the Navy by five goals to one in a very colourless match which attracted a very small crowd.

Feature of the match was the five goals scored by Fox who replaced Hossack in the centreforward berth.

Moxham, Interport goalkeeper, touched the ball no more than three times; the one occasion he was really tested secured the only goal for Navy, the ball slipping under him from a weak shot by Hendy, Navy centre.

Moxham for the Army still remains a mystery. He has a very good goals average in his division, but was not given the slightest opportunity of showing himself.

Navysmith and Hills were given an easy time by the sterling work put in by their halves and the fact that Navy fielded a very weak attack. When called upon they acquitted themselves well, Hills more convineingly than his partner.

Guy was the backbone of the defence and gave an excellent and polished account of himself. He was all over the field, aiding the defence one moment and helping the forwards in the next. Freshwater had to contend with only the one forward on his side of the field and had quite an easy time. Willdnson was seen very often at loggerheads with the opposition half and gave a grand display completely subduling the Navy right flank.

FOX BRILLIANT FOX, Pearson and Saw were the pick of the Army forwards, in especial Fox. Unlike Hossack, he does not force, but insinuates himself through the opposing defence. Saw was content to lie back and ply his team-mates with beautiful and very accurate passes which had the effect of further demoralising the Navy defence. Pearson was in the limelight with his centres which were always placed just where they would do the most damage. Martin was very hardworking and at times appeared constructive. He did not, however, seem some fine runs but his finish was dian. often faulty and had the impression

Goodbye. Mr Chips

FTER five more years, Chips himself was ready to retire as a master at Brookfield School.

Ralston, the Headmaster, and Chips's fellow instructors gave him a farewell supper in the school dining hall.

Sir John Colley presided at the high table at which sat the other Governors and the faculty. Below them the whole school was assembled.

Ralston was concluding his address on the occasion; "Five years ago this summer, when I was new to Brookfield, I ventured to suggest to Mr. Chipping that it was time for him to retire. I was as new as that!" He waited, smiling, for the laughter to subside. "Well, we know each other better now. Mr. Chipping's loyalty has been equal to my every demand. even persuaded him to replace the venerable garment that had become another Brookfield tradi-

Renewed laughter interrupted him. "To-day no one regrets more sincerely than I do that he finally take my hint. I invite you all to join me in a toast: To Chips of Brookfield!" The toast was drunk in silence, followed by three rousing cheers in which those at the high table were as vociferous as the pupils themselves.

When seats had been resumed, Wainwright, 19, captain of the school, got nervously to his feet. "Wg all know," he began hesitantly. "that Mr. Chipping's. retirement is a great loss to Brookfield, but we hope that he will have many long and happy years. I'm not going to tell Mr. Chipping what we paid for the

For two-score years, Chipping, "Chips," has been Master in Brookfield School for boys.

Shy and diffident, he had been unable to make friends with the boys until his marriage, at the age of 40, to the young and beautiful Kathie Ellis.

She died in child-birth, and Chips, humanised by her influence, for the next 20 years won and kept the friendship and affection of the boys, but he was old-fashioned in his methods, rather slovenly in his dress, and the new Headmaster suggested that he retire on pension.

He refused and the Board of Governors upheld him-he could remain at Brookfield until he was a hundred, if he wished, they told him.

SUBMARINE WARFARE

How Britain Has Broken Nazi Sea Piracy

SPECIAL TO THE "TELEGRAPH"

PARIS, Jan. 18 (UP) .-- Vice Admiral Cecil Viyian Usborne, former Chief of the British Censorship, has arrived in Paris.

Vice Admiral Usborne, who was Senior Naval Officer Salonika during the World War, was called from retirement to assume the duties of Chief of the British Censorship. He resigned recently.

A hero of the last World War in the Dardanelles and a pioneer in the invention of the Paravane against mines, Vice Admiral Usborne saw action at Jutland and Zeebruste.

In an interview with "United | Press", Vice Admiral Usborne said: "It is safe to say that 30 German submarines have been sunk so far. The number may be even higher but I only fix that total as a conservative estimate.

"It is not positive proof that a submarine has been sunk when a spot of oil appears on the surface of the sea. The enemy might even have poured out oil to make us believe he has been sunk, Can't Continue

"I doubt whether Germany can continue to produce officers and crews! to man submarines indefinitely. During the World War, there were only five really great German submarine commanders, the others were merely secondary. When those five were accounted for there was no dash to the German submarine campaign. "This time it is the same thing.

We have already sunk or taken prisoner at least thirty submarine officers and men. It is hard to replace them and, as time goes on, almost impossible.

"The moral effect of those sinkenormous. We must realise that in a submarine only one man—the commander-knows what he doing, the others merely obey orders

"Even if Germany builds five submarines every fortnight they cannot keep up because they cannot provide so many good crews of fifty or sixty men each.

Not Enough Destroyers

"We lost valuable time at the outbreak of war because we did not have enough desiroyers, but now we are building them almost as fast as Germany is building submarines. If we had a naval base in Southern west, passed over List. Ireland as we had in the World War there would have been fewer sinkings in the Atlantic. It is a question of fuel because the destroyers operating out of Plymouth cannot cruise for a long time in mid-Atlantic. Submarines which go out from the five planes was also heard. British And German Ships Sunk

LONDON, Jan. 18 (Reuter). The British steamer, Clarn Ross, 5,500 tons, was lost late on Wednesday night after hilling a mine off the west coast.

The crew of 48 got away safely and, after drifting about in a small boat for three hours, were picked up by , a British warship and reached home

Nazi Ship Goes Down COPENHAGEN, Jan. 18 (Reuter). -A German steamer of 2,300 lons has been sunk by a mine off the Adland Islands.

She tried to get through a Swedish minefield without a pilot. She was carrying ore for Germany. A lifeboal is now realight in packice and a Swedish warship is going to the rescue of the crew. Greek Steamer Sunk LONDON, Jan. 18 (Reuter).-The Greek steamer, Asteria, 3,313 tons, was sunk by a mine in the North Scalast night. Eleven survivors and the body of another member of the crew were landed to-day at an east coast port after being adrift in a small boat for 15 hours. The 12 other members of the crew, including an English pilot, are feared to be drowned.

Submarines Survivors BERLIN, Jan. 18 (Reuter).—It is stated by official sources that four officers and 26 men of the lost British submarines, Seahorse, Undine and Starfish, have hitherto been rescued.

Sinking Mines Danger LONDON, Jan. 18 (British Wireless).—Asked in the House of Commons to-day whether in his view there was any danger to local fishermen resulting from the practice of sinking unexploded mines by, rifle fire, the Parliamentary Secretary of the Admiralty replied: "Special ships are being fitted out for blowing up floating mines, and these ships will work in the areas where most of the floating mines are to be found. It is essential, however, that patrol craft should continue to sink floating mines by tifle fire as a mine on the surface is a menace to shipping".

Mass Attacks By Air

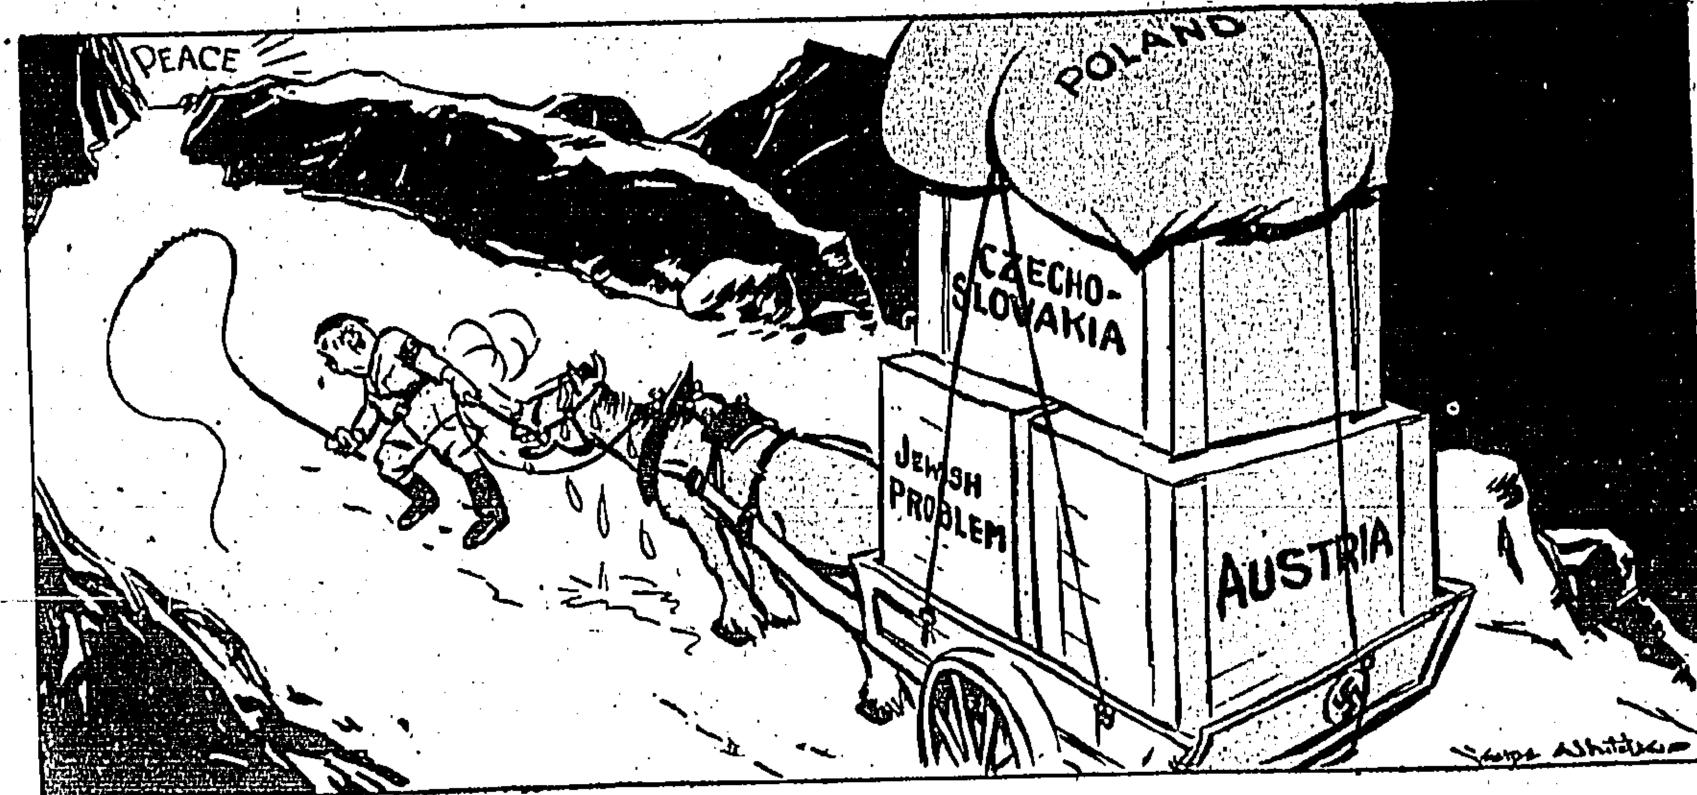

SO far the results of German attacks by air have been very favourable to the defence. Nothing would please us more than if the enemy continued those piecemeal operations. But that is not to be thought of for a moment. Sooner or later mass at-the first time the world will learn what lessons are to be got from air fighting on a large scale between two well-equipped forces Neither Spain nor Poland offered the means of judging.

As even a layman will understand, in an attack in mass some machines are bound to get through, but their chances of getting back may be very slen-

The difficulties of organising a mass operation are much greater than the inexpert may think. An aeronautical correspondent points to problems which only experience—and costly experience—can solve. There is, he says, the question of whether to approach the objective as one large formation or to converge on it from different directions. If the former plan is adopted there must be a place of rendezvous which may entail waste of time and petrol, and probably in poor visibility. Moreover, such a large formation would spread over such a wide area that concentrated fire on attacking fighters would be difficult or even impossible, whereas the fighters would be able to attack the outlying enemy planes in advan-tageous circumstances.

Other plans have their own problems, but the opinion of this aeronautical specialist is that the method most likely to be employed will be to converge upon the objective in a large number of smaller formations.

Men cannot get along without a religion. If one is abandoned another is adopted. The spirit of man craves a friendly God, and you give him economics. He asks for immortallty, and you say, "Be content, here is beer and becon."-W. MACHELLE

Labour's Peace

THAT should be the principles of a peace settlement? The first principle is that there should be no dictated peace. We have no desire to humiliate, to crush or to divide the German nation. There must be restitution made to the victims of aggression, but all ideas of revenge and punishment must be excluded.

If peace is to be lasting it must result from the agreement of all, not from the dictation of a few nations. The failure of the treaties at the end of the last war to bring abiding peace was largely due to the neglect of this prim-

But if we desire to build a new world its foundations must be laid not only by the large and strong, but by the small and less powerful. It is the function of law to prevent the strong abusing his strength at the expense of the weak. The smaller nations, just because they are not aggressive, bring to the councils of the nations a most valuable element.

The second principle necessarily follows. It is the recognition of the right of all nations, great or small, of whatever colour or creed, to live and to develop their own characteristic civilisation, provided that they do not thereby infringe the rights if others.

The German, reinquishing his conception of the primacy of the German race, must recognise that the Pde and the Czech and the Jew have as much right as he, no more and no less, to a place in the world and to a share in the bounty of Nature.

Equally, the Brion must recognise that the same is true of the African or any other inhabitant of the Eritish Empire. The German must concede to the Austrian the right to decide his own future. The Briton must equally concede the same right to the Indian.

No Force

Thirdly, there nust be a complete abandonment of aggression and of the use of armed force as an instrument of policy. War must be outlawed and the rule of law accepted. Where disputes cannot be amicably. settled by negotiation, they must be submitted to the decision of disinterested arbitrators and their decision accepted.

Fourthly, there nust be recognition of the rights of national, acial and religious minori-While as fir as possible every State should be left fre to manage its internal affairs, there is a common interest in the prevention of oppression, and in the recognition of the rights of indviduals.

Where there an racial minorities in any State, there must be some effective authority by an international body over the sovereign rights of the individual State.

Fifthly, there must be acceptance of the principle that intenational anarchy is incompatible with pace, and that in the common interest theremust be recognition of an . International authority superlor to the Individual States and endowed not only with rights over them, but with power to make them effective, openting not only in the political, but in the conomic sphere. Europe must federate or prish.

Sixthly, there tust be abandonment of imperialism and aceptance of the principle that in the government of colonies and dependencies where sif-government cannot yet be conceded, the inbrests of the natives must be paramount, andthat there must be equal access for all natins to markets and raw materials.

We Have Learned—

This combest biachieved by an extended and strongthened mandate system under international authority. We hold that the redistribution of clonial territories between; rival imperialisms s no solution, for we do not admit that an nation has the right to hold others in subjetion.

It will be seen that the acceptance of these principles will invive the creation of international machiner in order to make them effective. If aggresion is to cease, there must be some force by which the aggressor can be compelled in the lot resort to desist."

The experience of the last twenty years has shown that to intrust the duty of aniforcing the rule of lwate individual States, operating with ther own armed forces, has. proved unworkable

There must insend be an international force, possessed for such overwhelming

-by The Rt. Hon. C.R. Attlee, M.P.

The following Principles of Peace were laid down by Mr. Attlee in an important speech at the Caxton Hall, London, recently. The full speech, which includes a comprehensive analysis of the events leading up to the war, is to be published as a pamphlet.

strength that no would-be aggressor would dare to challenge it.

ge For many reasons an international air force is the most appropriate instrument. In addition, every State must accept the obligation of bringing against any disturber. of the peace the power of economic sanctions.

As a natural corollary of the establishment of an international force, there must be a drastic reduction of all national forces to the amount necessary for the preservation of internal order.

Such armed forces as remain in the hands of individual States must be subjected to international inspection. Private manufacture and trade in armaments must be abolished.

The existence of an international force necessarily implies an international authority to control it.

It would be unwise to attempt to set out in detail the exact nature of such an authority or do more than specify the principles on which it should be established.

Fair for All

There are broadly two ways in which such an authority might be constituted. It might be autocratic or democratic. In the former case, a small number of great Powers might dominate and enforce their will on the remainder. In the latter, all States would share in decisions.

A world or a Europe under the orders of four or five big States would not be free. It might merely be an imperialism in commission. We, as believers in democracy, hold that the small nations which have formerly contributed, and still do to-day, so much of value to the world, should take their full share in an international authority.

I have aiready indicated some of the duties which an international authority would have to perform. It should deal with the difficult frontier problems which are the estensible cause of the present war.

The settlement of these questions is sometimes in the mind of these who speak of peace terms, but, in fact, the solution of these prob-Iems depends on the adoption of the principles which I have already laid down.

Many frontier problems are due to boundaries having been drawn in conformity with strategic considerations which will have no relevance in a world from which war has been banished.

Many errors have been made because of the exclusive nationalism which demands a coincidence of economic and political frontiers. Minority questions are rendered more, difficult of solution owing to an exaggeratedconception of the need for uniformity in a State, again due largely to military considerations.

Room to Live

It would be a mistake to try to redraw the map of Europe as part of the proposals for a peace settlement. It is right to affirm that Austrians, Czechs, Poles and Cormans are mations with the right to room to live, but It would be premature to consider exact boundaries until principles have been accepted. Adjustments of boundaries, and even, where necessary, and practicable, just and peaceful transfers of population, could be effected through the international authority.

In some instances there might have to be provision for a measure of local autonomy. The Jewish problem, which concerns so many States, can only be settled by an international authority.

It would be equally premature to lay down as part of the conditions of peace whether the new international authority should in the first place be confined to Europe or whether it should embrace other continents. That must depend on how widely these principles. are accepted, though clearly it ought to be built on the widest foundations.

No less dangerous than the political is the economic nnarchy of the world. When, the war ends, there will be widespread economic dislocation, and great poverty, while the dras-. tic reduction of armaments which we envisage will release an immense industrial capacity which will be wasted unless steps are taken to divert it into a channel where it will be of service to mankind.

Bold economic planning on a world scale will be an imperative necessity to meet the post-war situation, and to avoid in the future recurrent economic crises.

Social Justice

International institutions for this purpose must be created. It is of at least equal lmportance that the scope and authority of the International Labour Office should be en-

It should be given the task of preparing international minimum standards of wages. hours and industrial conditions, in order that, by increased production, by a more just distribution and by the wealth released from expenditure upon arms, the standard of living of the workers shall everywhere be raised. For peace depends on social justice within States, no less than on political justice between States.

It may be urged that the principles which I have laid down are too far-reaching and that the whole scheme is chimerical, idealistic and beyond the bounds of practical politics.

It may be urged that it will be difficult to gain acceptance for such a vast change and that it would be wiser to seek a more modest objective. The answer to this is that remedies are conditioned by the gravity of the diseases which they are designed to cure. If we want a peaceful world we must be prepared to face the great changes which must be involved.

We believe that these principles can be accepted by all peoples and can form the basis" of a just and enduring peace.

We seek no favoured position. We do not demand from others what we are not' prepared to concede ourselves. We appeal for support to these principles first of all to our own people, to all of those who, whether or. not they belong to the Labour Party, share our faith in democracy and our desire for peace.

we ask them to consider whether or not in. their opinion these principles meet the needs of this country and of the world. We appeal. to the people of all countries who equally long. for peace and we appeal especially to the people of Germany, in whose hands lies the decision whether or not millions of men, women and children are to suffer death.

Germany's Choice

Herr Hitler has started this war, but he can only continue it if the German people continue to support him. The fact that he is. the leader of the German people does not relieve them of their responsibilities to one another and to the world.

Peaco is obtainable now, provided that there is an abandonment of aggression and a recognition of the rights of all nations and of all people. We do not seek the destruction or the dismemberment of Germany. We wish no ill to the German people. We are ready towelcome them into the family of nations, We declare our principles, which are no different from those which we proclaimed at the time when Germany was prograte after the last war. We stand by our principles, not because of any weakness, but because of our confidence in the victory of our cause We are ready whenever we are called upon to take responsibility for the government of the country, to do our utmost to got theid principles accepted and put into effect.

NAZI PLOT EXPOSED BY POLAND

Minority In Close Contact With Berlin

SPECIAL TO THE "TELEGRAPH" PARIS, Jan. 17 (UP).— A Polish Government official statement has disclosed details of a. German plan whereby the German minority in Poland, used prior to the war to sabotage and spy upon the Polish people, are now working in closest contact with Berlin, which has furnished them with arms.

The statement is issued in order to refute the atrocity stories distributed by Germans to the effect that the Poles mistreated the German minority, before the War and contmitted harrible nets of violence during the early stages of the Wor.

The statement says: "When the Germans invaded Poland, members of these Nazi organisations look up aims against the Polish soldiers, will be tantamount to further police and civilian population whom they started systematically to shoot That is why the Polish army, aided by the population, was obliged at Bydgosez, Torun and other lecalities, to put down the German revolt. Sabotage And Spying .

"In such a situation there were naturally easualties on both sides. From hundreds of depositions and nuthentic documents the Pollsh Government has confirmed that the Nazis in Poland, engaged in substage and spying, were collaborating directly with the German army.

"Further confirmation was obtained when a German warplane was brought down near Poznan and a book with secret instructions for the German minority was found and the whole plan revealed." The statement goes on to explain that all Germans in Poland were ex-, pected to Join the German army immediately the Releb invaded Poland or at least to start violent gueriffa warfare.

The Germans in the army and the Germans in the minority group were given various symbols such as handkerchiefs, insignias and brassards to indicate the right persons with whom to work.

. The instruction book showed that the German password in the War was "Echo," the German word for engineers was "Rirol" and artillery was "Artur." Such documents, the statement concludes, affords the best reply to calumnies spread by the German authorities about Poland.

British Trade On Increase

Buoyant Condition Despite War

LONDON, Jan. 18 (Reuter) -A special commentary states that the British overseas trade figures-for-December again-illustrate the successful maintenance of the normal levels of the seaborne traffle in British ports.

The value of the imports was 17 per cent, higher than in December, 1938. The improvement is authoritatively stated to be due to a genuine increase in purchases abroad. Exports Increase

Owners To ARMY TROUNCE NAVY FOX SCORES ALL FIVE GOALS FOR WINNERS

(By "Rex")

The first round of the Kotewall Cup was decided at Caroline Hill yesterday when the Army defeated the Navy by five goals to one in a very colourless match which attracted a very small crowd. Feature of the match was the five goals scored by Fox who replaced Hossack in the centreforward berth. Moxham, Interport goalkeeper, touched the ball no more than three times; the one occasion he was really tested secured the only goal for Navy, the ball slipping under him from a weak shot by Hendy, Navy centre. Moxham for the Army still 17 remains a mystery. He has a very good goals average in his division, but was not given the slightest opportunity of showing himself. Naysmith and Hills were given an easy time by the sterling work put in by their halves and the fact that Navy fielded a very weak attack. When called upon they acquitted themselves well, Hills more convin-cingly than his partner. Guy was the backbone of the defence and gave an excellent and polished account of himself. He was all over the field, aiding the defence one moment and helping the forwards in the next. Freshwater had to contend with only the one forward on his side of the field and had quite an easy time. Wilkinson was seen very often at loggerhends with the 'opposition half and gave a grand display completely subduing the Navy right flank. FOX BRILLIANT FOX, Pearson and Saw were the pick of the Army forwards, in especial Fox. Unlike Hossack, he does not force, but inslnuates himself through the opposing, defence. Saw was content to lie back and ply his team-mates with beautiful and very accurate passes which had the effect of further demoralising the Navy defence. Pearson was in the limelight with his centres which were always placed just where they would do the most damage. Martin was very hardworking and at times appeared constructive. He did not, however, seem to relish working with Pearson, with and he lacks a great deal of that whom he showed little understand- self-assurance that accounted for his ing. Thomas on the left came in for meteoric, rise as a very good custosome fine runs but his finish, was dian.

often faulty and had the impression of petering out. Robinson opened up as usual with n bad case of nerves. His past performances seem to prey on his mind |-

HAM SANDWICH FUTURE AT STAKE 6 That?s A

A phase of the "waiting war" threatened the future of the ham sandwich-popularly reputed to have had its start in England. Under the rationing plan, food books contain only two meat tickets a week. A sandwich will count as half a ticket. A Food Ministry official expressed doubt that many persons would spend their meat allowances in that fashion. +++++++++++++++++++++++++

Goodbye. Mr Chips From the Novel by AMES HILTON

Adapted from the M.-G.-M. Picture by LEBBEUS MITCHELL,

FTER five more years, Chips himself was ready to retire as a master at Brookfield School.

Ralston, the Headmaster, and Chips's fellow instructors gave him a farewell supper in the school dining hall.

Sir John Colley presided at the high table at which sat the other Governors and the faculty. Below them the whole school was assembled.

. Ralston was concluding his address on the occasion: "Five years ago this summer, when I was new to Brookfield, I ventured to suggest to Mr. Chipping that it was time for him to retire. I was as new as that!" He waited, smiling, for the laughter to subside, "Well, we know each other better now. Mr. Chipping's loyalty has been equal to my every demand. I even persuaded him to replace the venerable garment that had become another Brookfield tradi-

The toast was drunk in silence, followed by three rousing cheers in which those at the high table were as vociferous as the pupils themselves.

When seats had been resumed,

Wainwright, 19, captain of the school, got nervously to his feet. "We all know," he began hesitantly, "that Mr. Chipping's retirement_is_a_great_iloss_to_ Brookfield, but we hope that he will have many long and happy years. Shy and diffident; he had been unable to make friends with the boys until his marriage, at the age of 40, to the young and beautiful Kathie Ellis.

She died in child-birth, and Chips, humanised by her influence, for the next 20 years won and kept the friendship and affection of the boys, but he was old-fashioned in his methods, rather slovenly in his dress, and the new Headmaster suggested that he retire on pension.

HOPE ABANDONED FOR RECOVERY SENATOR WILLIAM BORAH SPECIAL TO THE "TELEGRAPH"

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18 (UP).—Senator William E. Borah, stormy petrel of American politics, lover of unpopular causes and leader of the Isolationists, is dying.

The leader of the Republican Party in the U.S. Senate was stricken with cerebral hemorrhage yesterday and all hope of his recovery is now abandoned.

The latest bulletin says that he has sunk into a coma. His condition is described as "very grave,"

The hemorrhage occurred when the aged Senator slipped on a rug in his home and fell NEW heavily.

Mrs. Borah weepingly told pressmen to-night that there is no hope of the Senator's recovery. Senator Borah is in his 75th year.

HELSINGFORS, JAN. 19 (UP) .- FINLAND'S PLUCKY RESISTANCE TO THE RED INVASION, WHICH ENTERS ITS EIGHTH WEEK TO DAY, IS BRINGING FRESH SURPRISES TO MILITARY OB-SERVERS.

Last week's successes on the Petsamo and Soumussalmi fronts, which cleared the Russians from Finnish soil in at least four points, are apparently being repeated on the important Salla front.

The great Russian offensive which was launched on Sunday has completely died away.

The Finnish counter-offensive seems to have met with a success that can only be described as astounding.

Only in one sector did the Russians, during their long-heralded offensive, gain any ground.

Not only have they been repulsed from this sector, but the Finns have shattered their lines along the entire front and have, according to official communiques, forced the Russians to retreat over 29 miles.

This is the first official confirmation of rumours of another Red disaster, which were first reported in Stockholm newspapers yesterday.

According to the Stockholm report, Russian reinforcements have been unable to hold up the Finnish advance.

As a result, fighting is now said to be occurring at some points in this sector on Russian soil, the first time since the outbreak of hostilities that the Finns have crossed the frontier in the was Senior Naval Officer Salonika during the World War, was called from retirement to assume' the duties of Chief of the British Censorship. He resigned recently.

A hero of the last World War in the Dardanelles and a pioneer in the invention of the Paravane against mines, Vice Admiral Usborne saw action at Jutland and Zeebruge. In an interview with "United Press", Vice Admiral Usborne said: "It is sufe to say that 30 German submarines have been sunk so far. The number may be even higher but I only fix that total as a conservative estimate.

Mass Attacks By Air

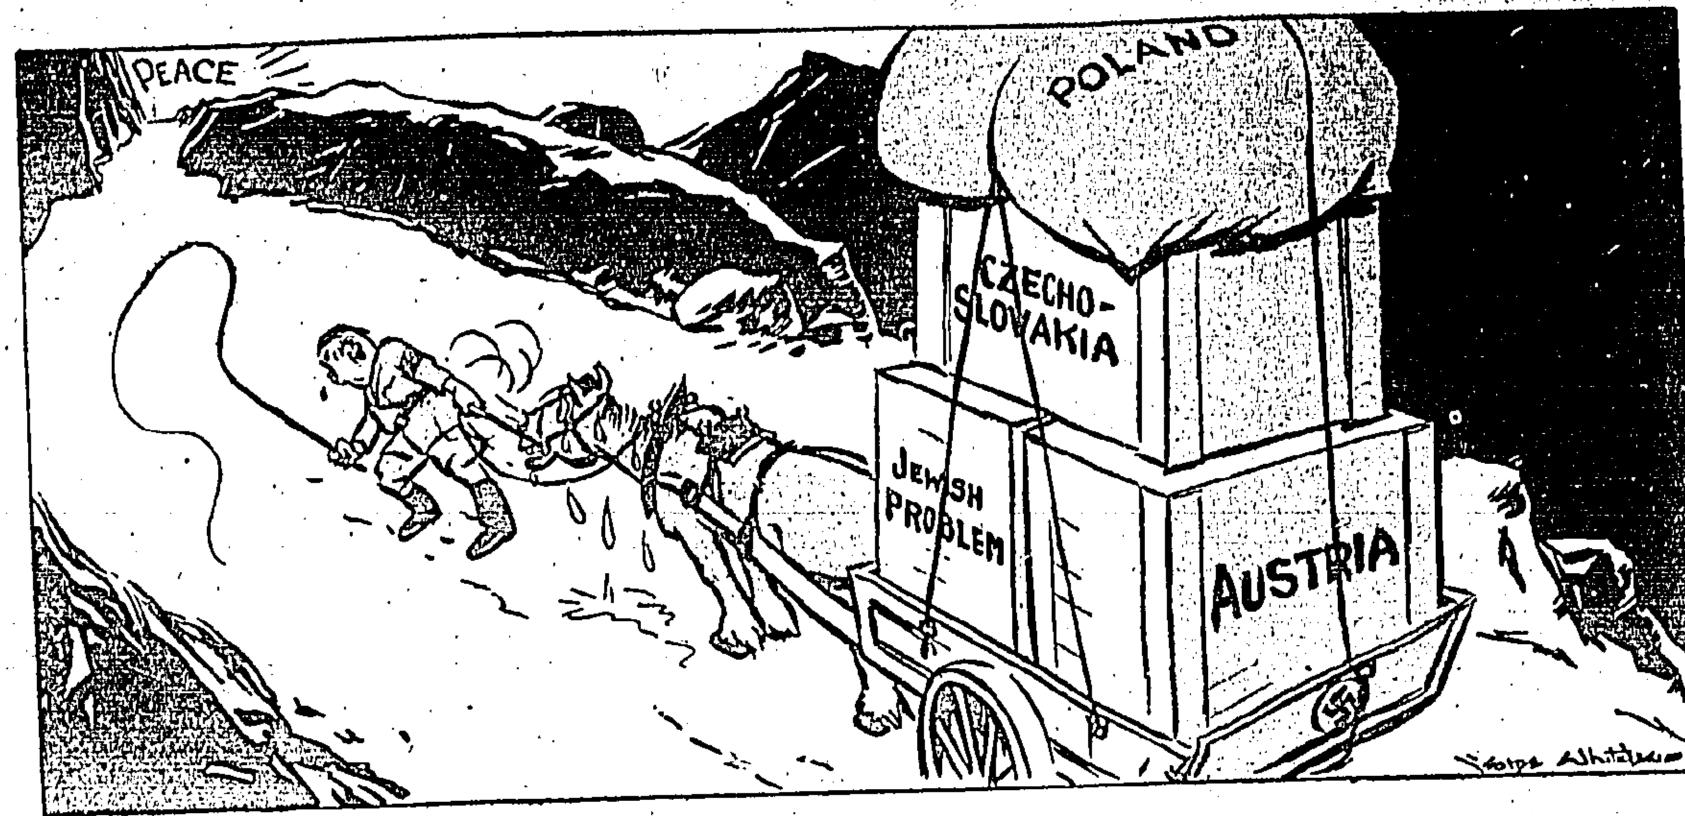

SO far the results of German attacks by air have been very favourable to the defence. Nothing would please us more than if the enemy continued those piecemeal operations. But that is not to be thought of for a moment. Sooner or later mass at-the first time the world will learn what lessons are to be got from air fighting on a large scale between two well-equipped forces. Neither Spain nor Poland offered the means of judging.

> 'As even a layman will understand, in an attack in mass some machines are bound to get through, but their chances of getting back may be very slen-

The difficulties of organising a mass operation are much greater than the inexpert may think. An aeronautical correspondent points to problems which only experience—and costly experience-can solve. There is, he says, the question of whether to approach the objective as one large formation or to converge on it from different directions. If the former plan is adopted there must be a place of rendezvous which may entail waste of time and petrol, and probably in poor visibility. Moreover, such a large formation would spread over such a wide area that concentrated fire on attacking fighters would be difficult or even impossible, whereas the fighters would be able to attack the outlying enemy 'planes in advantageous circumstances.

Other plans have their own problems, but the opinion of this aeronautical specialist is that the method most likely to be employed will be to converge upon the objective in a large number of smaller formations.

Men cannot get along without a religion. If one is abandoned another is adopted. The spirit of man craves a friendly God, and you give him economics. He asks for immortallty, and you say, "Be content, here is beer and bacon."-W. MACNELLE

Jahour's Peace

THAT should be the principles of a peace settlement? The first principle is that there should be no dictated peace. We have no desire to humiliate, to crush or to divide the German nation. There must be restitution made to the victims of aggression, but all ideas of revenge and punishment must be excluded. If peace is to be lasting it must result from the agreement of all, not from the dictation of a few nations. The failure of the treaties at the end of the last war to bring abiding peace was largely due to the neglect of this prin-

But if we desire to build a new world its foundations must be laid not only by the large and strong, but by the small and less powerful. It is the function of law to prevent the strong abusing his strength at the expense of the weak. The smaller nations, just because they are not aggressive, bring to the councils of the nations a most valuable element.

The second principle necessarily follows. It is the recognition of the right of all nations, great or small, of whatever colour or creed, to live and to develop their own characteristic civilisation, provided that they do not thereby infringe the rights of others.

The German, relinquishing his conception of the primacy of the German race, must recognise that the Pole and the Czech and the Jew have as much right as he, no more and no less, to a place in the world and to a share in the bounty of Nature.

-Equally,-the-Briton-must-recognise_thatthe same is true of the African or any other Imhabitant of the British Empire. The German must concede to the Austrian the right to decide his own future. The Briton must equally concede the same right to the Indian.

No Force

. Thirdly, there must be a complete abandonment of aggression and of the use of armed force as an instrument of policy. War , must be outlawed and the rule of law accepted. Where disputes cannot be amicably settled by negotiation, they must be submitted to the decision of disinterested arbitrators and their decision accepted.

Fourthly, there must be recognition of the rights of national, racial and religious minorities. While as far as possible every State should be left free to manage its internal affairs, there is a common interest in the prevention of oppression, and in the recognition of the rights of individuals.

Fifthly, there must be acceptance of the principle that international anarchy is incompatible with peace, and that in the common interest there must be recognition of an international authority superior to the individual States and endowed not only with rights over them, but with power to make them effective, operating not only in the political, but in the economic sphere. Europe must federate or perish.

Sixthly, there must be abandonment of imperialism and acceptance of the principle that in the government of colonies and dependencies where self-government cannot yet be conceded, the interests of the natives must be paramount, and that there must be equal access for all nations to markets and raw materials.

We Have Learned—

This can best be achieved by an extended and strengthoned mandate system under international authority. We hold that the redistribution of colonial territories between rival imperiolisms is no solution, for we do not admit that any nation has the right to hold others in subjection.

It will be seen that the acceptance of these principles will involve the creation of international machinery in order to make them effective. If aggression is to cease, there must be some force by which the aggressor can be compelled in the last resort to desist.

The experience of the last twenty years has shown that to entrust the duty of enforcing the rule of law to individual States. operating with their own armed forces, has proved unworkable.

There must instead be an international force, possessed, of such overwhelming

-by The Rt. Hon. C.R. Attlee, M.P.

The following Principles of Peace were laid down by Mr. Attlee in an important speech at the Caxton Hall, London, recently. The full speech, which includes a comprehensive analysis of the events leading up to the war, is to be published as a

strength that no would-be aggressor would dare to challenge it. p For many reasons an international air force is the most appropriate instrument.

In addition, every State must accept the -obligation-of-bringing-against-any-disturber of the peace the power of economic sanctions. As a natural corollary of the establishment of an international force, there must be a drastic reduction of all national forces to the amount necessary for the preservation of internal order.

Such armed forces as remain in the hands of individual States must be subjected to international inspection. Private manufacture and trade in armaments must be abolished.

The existence of an international force necessarily implies an international authority to control lt.

It would be unwise to attempt to set out in detail the exact nature of such an authority or do more than specify the principles on which it should be established.

Fair for All

There are broadly two ways in which such an authority might be constituted. It might be autocratic or democratic. In the former case, a small number of great Powers might dominate and enforce their will on the remainder. In the latter, all States would share in decisions.

A world or a Europe under the orders of four or five big States would not be free. It might merely be an imperialism in commission. We, as believers in democracy, hold that the small nations which have formerly contributed, and still do to-day, so much of value to the world, should take their full share in an international authority.

I have already indicated some of the duties which an international authority would have to perform. It should deal with the difficult frontier problems which are the estensible cause of the present war.

The settlement of these questions is sometimes in the mind of those who speak of peace terms, but, in fact, the solution of these problems depends on the adoption of the principles which I have already laid down.

Many frontier problems are due to boundaries having been drawn in conformity with strategic considerations which will have no relevance in a world from which war has been banished.

Many errors have been made because of the exclusive nationalism which demands a coincidence of economic and political frontiers. Minority questions are rendered more difficult of solution owing to an exaggerated conception of the need for uniformity in a State, again due largely to military considerations.

Room to Live

It would be a mistake to try to redraw the map of Europe as part of the proposals for a poace settlement. It is right to affirm that Austrians, Czechs, Poles and Cermans are nations with the right to room to live, but it would be premature to consider exact boundaries until principles have been accepted. Adjustments of boundaries, and even. where necessary, and practicable, just and peaceful transfers of population, could be effected through the international authority.

In some instances there might have to be provision for a measure of local autonomy. . The Jewish problem, which concerns so many States, can only be settled by an international authority. It would be equally premature to lay down as part of the conditions of peace whether the new international authority should in the first place be confined to Europe or whether it should embrace other continents. That must depend on how widely these principles are accepted, though clearly it ought to be built on the widest foundations. No less dangerous than the political is the economic anarchy of the world. When the war ends, there will be widespread economic dislocation, and great poverty, while the drastic reduction of armaments which we envisage will release an immense industrial capacity which will be wasted unless steps are taken to divert it into a channel where it will be of service to mankind.

Bold economic planning on a world scalewill be an imperative necessity to meet the post-war situation, and to avoid in the future recurrent economic crises.

Social Justice

International institutions for this purpose must be created. It is of at least equal importance that the scope and authority of the International Labour Office should be en-

It should be given the task of preparing international minimum standards of wages. hours and industrial conditions, in order that, by increased production, by a more just distribution and by the wealth released from expenditure upon arms, the standard of living of the workers shall everywhere be raised. For peace depends on social justice within States, no less than on political justice between States.

It may be urged that the principles which I have laid down are too far-reaching and that the whole scheme is chimerical, idealistic and beyond the bounds of practical politics. It may be urged that it will be difficult to gain acceptance for such a vast change and that it would be wiser to seek a more modest objective. The answer to this is that remedies are conditioned by the gravity of the diseases which they are designed to cure. If we want a peaceful world we must be prepared to face the great changes which must be involved.

We believe that these principles can be accepted by all peoples and can form the basis of a just and enduring peace.

'We seek no favoured position. We do: not demand from others what we are not prepared to concede ourselves. We appeal for support to these principles first of all to our own people, to all of those who, whether or not they belong to the Labour Party, share our faith in democracy and our desire for peace.

We ask them to consider whether or not in their opinion these principles meet the needs of this country and of the world. We appeal to the people of all countries who equally long for peace and we appeal especially to the people of Germany, in whose hands lies the decision whether or not millions of men, women and children are to suffer death.

Germany's Choice

Herr Hitler has started this war, but he can only continue it if the German people continue to support him. The fact that he is the leader of the German people does not relieve them of their responsibilities to one another and to the world.

Peace is obtainable now, provided that, there is an abandonment of aggression and and recognition of the rights of all nations and, of, all people.' We do not seek the destruction or the dismemberment of Germany. We wish no ill to the German people. We are ready to welcome them into the family of nations.

We declare our principles, which are no different from those which we proclaimed at the time when Germany was prostrate after the last war. We stand by our principles: not because of any weakness, but because of our confidence in the victory of our cause

BPECIAL TO THE "TELEGRAPH" PARIS, Jan. 17 (UP). — A Polish Government official statement has disclosed details of a German plan whereby the German minority in Poland, used prior to the war to sabotage and spy upon the Polish people, are now working in closest contact with Berlin, which has furnished them with arms.

The statement is issued in order to refute the atrocity atories distributed by Germans to the effect that the Poles mistreated the German minority before the War and committed horrible nets of violence during the early stages of the War. ECONOMIC FRONT

Home Press Continues Its Criticisms

LONDON, Jan. 18 (Reuter). -The speech on Wednesday of Mr. Ronald Cross, the Minister for Economic Warfare, was the subject of to-day's comment in the British Press.

There is criticism of the methods of procedure, and in some quarters a closer co-operation between the various departments is advocated, The "Manchester Guardian," for instance, says that the two committees responsible for the co-ordination of economic actions lack the efficiency of a Minister of Cabinet rank with the power to direct other Government departments. What Is Needed

Field Marshall Goering, the second man in Germany, the paper points out, is in exclusive charge of Germany's economic effort. Could we say that we had paid this important side of the war an equal compliment? The "News Chronlele" says that what is needed is a minister of authority and imagination who will give a new direction on the whole economic policy of the war, a minister with authority to co-ordinate the work of several departments and see that the plans are carried out.

Too Optimistic

The "Daily Herald" feels that insufficient powers have been given to Mr. Cross or anyone else. Britain and France need closer co-ordination in the efforts to drive Nazi trade out of European markets.

The "Daily Telegraph" feels that Mr. Cross has crred on the side of optimism in his estimate of the results achieved. The stocks accumulated in Germany in peace-time were probably greater than he is prepared

Labour Wants Reorganisation LONDON, Jan. 18 (Reuter) .- The Labour Party is pressing the Government for a statement, to be made soon by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, on economic co-ordination. It is expected that the statement will be made the week after the next, when there will be a general debate on the whole subject. The Labour view, says "Reuter's" Lobby correspondent, is that there should be a minister charged with the responsibility of looking after economic functions as distinct from finance, and that such a minister should be in the War Cabinet and on the same basis as the Chancellor of

His functions would be to plan the economy of the country, both in the home industries and our interests profit-taking sales were quickly abroad, and he would be free from departmental responsibilities.

War Cabinet Changes It is also likely that the Prime Minister will be urged to make such changes in the War Cabinet in order to leave most of the members without portfolio so that they can devote themselves more fully to the task of winning the war. The Government point of view hitherto has been that the present system of dealing with economic matters which are covered by the various departments is satisfactory, and that critics do not appreciate the difficulties of the position, while the Prime Minister hitherto has given no indication that he desires to make any change in the composition of the Lord Sankey stated in the House of Lords yesterday that the number of members in the War Cabinet was not too large, and added that the system of co-ordination as applied to the defence system was not applicable in the economic sphere.

FOX SCORES ALL FIVE GOALS FOR WINNERS

(By "Rox")

The first round of the Kotewall Cup was decided at Caroline Hill yesterday when the Army defeated the Navy by five goals to one in a very colourless match which attracted a very small

Feature of the match was the five goals scored by Fox who replaced Hossack in the centreforward berth.

Moxham, Interport goalkeeper, touched the ball no more than three times; the one occasion he was really tested secured the only goal for Navy, the ball slipping under him from a weak shot by Hendy, Navy centre.

Moxham for the Army still remains a mystery. He has a very good goals average in his division, but was not given the slightest opportunity of showing himself. Naysmith and Hills were given an easy time by the sterling work put in by their halves and the fact that Navy fielded a very weak attack. When called upon they acquitted themselves well, Hills more convincingly than his partner.

Guy was the backbone of the defence and gave an excellent and polished account of himself. He was all over the field, aiding the defence one moment and helping the forwards in the next. Freshwater had to contend with only the one forward oh his side of the field and had quite an easy time. Wilkinson was seen very often at loggerheads with the opposition half and gave a grand display completely subduing the Navy

right flank. FOX BRILLIANT FOX. Pearson and Saw were the pick of the Army forwards, in especial Fox. Unlike Hossack, he does not force, but insinuates himself through the opposing defence. Saw was content to lie back and ply his team-mates with beautiful and very accurate passes which had the effect of further demoralising the Navy defence. Pearson was in the limelight with his centres which were always placed just where they would do the most damage. Martin was very hard-working and at times appeared constructive. He did not, however, seem to relish working with Pearson, with and he lacks a great deal of that whom he showed little understand- self-assurance that accounted for his ing. With a little more support he ought to develop into a fine centre. Phippens was definitely off-form. He very often over-ran himself and found Hills too chuch of a brickwall for him to butt against. O'Regan was good as a feeder and it must have disconcerted him a great deal to see Phippens wasting his passes in such deptorable way. Thoburn dropped back from the very begin-  ning and spoiled what might have amounted to a good forward line. SHOCKING NAZI BOAST

LONDON, Jan. 18 (Reuter). German news bulletin published in Tokyo boasted that German aircraft recently "annihilated" two 'Danish steamers, the Feddy and the Ivan Kondrup, in the North Sea. This is a typical instance not only of the German attempts to bully neutrals by deliberate violations of international law, but also of their deliberate evasion of the truth, as proved by the German "Trans-Ocean" news service which, on January 10, quoted a Pritish Admiralty statement that the two ships alleged to be annihilated were still affoat and were being towed to port.

From the Novel by JAMES HILTON

LEBBEUS MITCHELL, WAR DRUMS

FTER five more years, Chips himself was ready to retire as a master at Brookfield School.

Ralston, the Headmaster, and Chips's fellow instructors gave him a farewell supper in the school dining hall.

Sir John Colley presided at the high table at which sat the other Governors and the faculty. Below them the whole school was assembled.

Ralston was concluding his address on the occasion: "Five years ago this summer, when I was new to Brookfield, I ventured to suggest to Mr. Chipping that it was time for him to retire. I was as new as that!" He waited, smiling, for the laughter to subside. Well, we know each other better now. to join me in a toast: To Chips: of Brookfield!" toast was drunk in silence, followed by three rousing cheers in which those at the high table were as veciferous as the pupils themselves. When seats had been resumed, Wainwright, 19, captain of the school, got nervously to his feet. 'We all know," he began hesitantly, "that Mr. Chipping's retirement is a great loss to Brookfield, but we hope that he will have many long and happy years. I'm not going to tell Mr. Chipping what we paid for the scribed to it—and every sub- served.

For two-score years, Chipping, "Chips," has been Master in Brookfield School for boys.

Shy and diffident, he had been unable to make friends with the boys until his marriage, at the age of 40, to the young and beautiful Kathie Ellis.

She died in child-birth, and Chips, humanised by her influence, for the next 20 years won and kept the friendship and affection of the boys, but he was old-fashioned in his methods, rather slovenly in his dress, and the new Headmaster suggested that he retire on pension.

He refused and the Board of Governors upheld him-he could remain at Brookfield until he was a hundred, if he wished, they told him.

LONDON, Jan. 19 (Reuter).—The Soviet Government still recognises the Government of Generalissimo Chlang Kai-shek, but recent professions of friendship towards China which have appeared in the Soviet Press have made more mention of the Chinese people than of Chiang Kai-shek, says the Moscow Correspondent of the "Times,"

The latest official reference to the Soviet policy towards China was in Stalin's message to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shele, wishing China a Presumably Stalin had in mind Great Britain, France and America, the "Imperialists" whom the Soviet Union also rates as enemies of China. The Soviet newspapers are giving the impression that the Soviet Union expected much from the change of government in Japan. The newspaper "Trud" points out the dilemma which has been responsible, for the political instability in Japan. On the one hand, there is Japan's desire to end the war in China in the quickest possible time. ("Trud" did not say so, but it meant that an agreement with the Soviet Union could be useful to Japan). On the other hand Japan's economic difficulties consequent upon the war in China make it expedient for her to improve relations with the United States. The new Japanese Premier, says the Russian paper, appears to stand for
